Melo Report says killings state's responsibility under int'l law

AI warns RP: Act now before violence rules May elections

Vol. Centenas

IN A POSTSCRIPT TO THE EXPLOSIVE impact of the Melo Commission and a United Nations rights report on the political killings in the country, Amnesty International has warned that all that effort would go to waste if violence would once more dominate the May polls.

"The election period will be fraught with its own tensions. It is essential that the maintenance of all political parties control to working strenuously to put an end to the ongoing killings and to ensure the risk of a further escalation of violence during the polls," the London-based rights watchdog said yesterday in a statement.

It said the Melo Report, together with the initial findings of Philip Alston, the UN special rapporteur on extrajudicial executions, "should give the impetus to the government and all political parties and groups to act decisively to end the political killings in the run-up to legislative and local elections in May."

Said Susan HILL, Amnesty International deputy Asia Pacific director: "The body of evidence is now so compelling that it can no longer be ignored. There is substantial confirmation of the pattern of political killings in the Philippines."

But for all that, Amnesty International...

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo may be held accountable under international law if the political killings remain unresolved and unabated under her watch, according to the Melo Commission.

In its 88-page report, the commission led by former Supreme Court Justice Jose Melo warned that the government could not sit "idly by and refuse to act."

"Ultimately, the State has the responsibility of protecting its citizens and making sure that their fundamental liberties are respected," it said.

The commission drew attention to a growing worldwide consensus for state responsibility for non-state acts.

"[It] points out that if the State fails to investigate, prosecute or redress private, non-state acts in violation of fundamental liberties, it is in effect aiding the perpetration of such violations, for which it could be held responsible under international law," it said.

For Press Secretary Ignacio Bener, who furnished the Whitehall Press Corps a copy of the report on Thursday evening: "The report does not solve the problem, it sets it."

Bener said that "from the beginning, the government has strongly condemned the killings of activists and journalists," and stressed that his Arroyo formed the Melo Commission "in order to get to the bottom of the political killings that have plagued the nation for many generations."

He pointed out that the government had even invited members of the international community, such as the European Union and United Nations Special Rapporteur Philip Alston, to help expand the reach of the investigation.

Bener said his Arroyo had "taken decisive action back before the [Melo] report and also in answer to the report, to turn the nation forward and stop these killings once and for all."

He added: "The President will continue to take the necessary action to achieve..."

'Kiko' to go; Gringo, Goma, Paredes eyed to replace him

By Dena Pazalagan and Norman Borlondo

SENATE MAJORITY LEADER FRANCIS Pangilinan rejected a Gotaque Opposition invitation for him to attend in Manila proclamation rally today and opposition members said the independent senator might be dropped from GO's senatorial slate.

A leading opposition candidate, Sorongon Rep. Francis Borlondo, said he would not be surprised if GO's executive council left Pangilinan out of its ticket.

Brushed by the logistics, detained former President Joseph Estrada only said: "I cannot comment on that. We will probably know after the proclamation rally tomorrow."

Pangilinan insisted he could not be compelled to show up at today's opposition rally as Pleta Miranda in Cotabato, or other major opposition senators as he was only a "guest candidate" of GO.

"It will not attend [the proclamation rally] because I am not an official member of GO. I'm only a guest candidate," he said in a statement in Filinvest.

"I have indicated I am an independent candidate," Pangilinan stressed.

For the past two weeks of the campaign, some opposition members have complained that it was unfair for GO to carry Pangilinan on its slate in the face of his refusal to be more with the rest of the candidates.

No more assets to protect in RPN 9, IBC 13

By Fernando del Mundo and Margaux C. Ortiz

(Special report)
NOWHERE IS THE RECORD OF THE Presidential Commission on Good Government more dismal than in its operations of the largest television networks during the martial law years—Radio Philippines Network (RPN 9) and International Broadcasting Corporation (IBC 13).

They are now destined to be consigned to the scrap heap of the industry under present circumstances.

Employers of these two networks say they are struggling to make both ends meet while PCGG-appointed managers enjoy perks beyond that allowed by its own code of ethics—no more than P12,000 a month.

Idelia Fargas, a former RPN 9 vice president, says PCGG appointed officials were getting in the 1990s as much as P30,000 a month—"quite a lot at that time." But in fact the more contentious issue is the network's steady search down the drain since the PCGG takeover.

Neda chief: Some gov't regulatory firms 'captured' by big business

(MANILA CITY)—IN A BARE DISPLAY of candor, the government's main economic policy-maker yesterday said state regulatory agencies have been "captured" by big business and working largely to benefit the latter instead of protecting the interest of the people.

"That's the problem. The interests of business have been very influential with the regulators," said Economic Planning Secretary Ramello Bert.

This is why people pay higher prices for goods and services offered by businesses that are supposed to be regulated by these same agencies, he said.

"The people are losing because they have to pay higher prices," said Bert who heads the National Economic and Development Authority.

Bert cited as one example two credit service sectors, the pawn and offshore, which government has been trying to de-monopolize for years to introduce more competition and bring down transport costs.

The poor state and management of the country's port facilities has been largely blamed for the inefficient movement of...

Chavit an 'investor' in Metrowalk, PCGG admits

By Dexter L. Loran
CHANCES ARE, AMY AND RANDY OF ORLANDO movies in DVD format has heard of or shopped in the popular Metrowalk Commercial Complex along Meralco Avenue in Pasig City.

Chances are, too, that any visitor to Metrowalk has heard whispers and rumors as to who really owns the busy shopping and dining center that sits on a prime piece of real estate that is being managed by the Presidential Commission on Good Government (PCGG).

"Chavit" is the name most often associated with the valuable—and sometimes controversial—property.

Indeed, the involvement of Flores Sr. Gen. Luis "Chavit" Sison in Metrowalk Commercial Complex has always been a matter of conjecture. Recently, however, the PCGG confirmed the rumors that the influential politician has never admitted to the Supreme in directly involved in the property.

"He is an investor in Pasig Printing," PCGG Commissioner Ramello M. Abante said in an interview with the Inquirer, when asked about Sison's interest in Metrowalk.

Abante was referring to Pasig Printing Corp., which stands at the corner of a...

Bets fear loss of GO official status

By Jerome Aoling and Gil Calabangon Jr.

OPPOSITION SENATORS YESTERDAY WARNED the Commission on Elections against declaring President Macapagal-Arroyo's political party, Kampi, as the "dominant minority party" that would shut out the opposition from representation in key election activities.

"If that happens, it will mean a mockery of our electoral system. It's just like a suspension against the benches of two opponents without a trial," said Sen. Panfilo Lacuna in a press conference last night. The United Opposition (UO) or the new Genuine Opposition (GO) coalition has the right to be declared the dominant minority party, he added.

Under election laws, only two political parties—the dominant majority and minority parties—may present candidates in national elections. The Senate is expected to be instrumental in determining the two parties based on the records of their participation in the previous election. The number of lawmakers elected belongs to them and their ability to fill up candidates' slots down to the municipal level.

Senate President Manuel Villar, in an interview with the Inquirer, said that if Kampi is picked as the dominant minority party, the opposition would be forced to cough up more funds to have more poll workers in precincts or accept a challenge.

Comical hearing

The Senate has yet to decide who is a political party and who is not. The committee for "dominant minority" is still in the process of determining the two parties based on the records of their participation in the previous election.

MILITANTS also descended here in front of the Edsa Shrine to signifying solidarity with caught politicians by surprise.

Militants mark Edsa I with rallies

By Jerome Aoling

MILITANTS GROOMED YESTERDAY staged separate rallies to mark the 22nd anniversary of the first Edsa People Power Revolution.

After failing to hold a rally at the Edsa Shrine in Mandaluyong City, the militant labor group Partido ng Manggagawa gathered instead at the Wilfredo Aranda in Quezon City to "bury" the spirit of the EDSA uprising. Members of the group made a mock burial ground with the symbolic first Edsa I and the people's hope for change (1986-2007). They also carried placards with the message:

Value 1: 22 years of pagmamahal ng mga Pilipino in pagmamahal ng mga Pilipino (Edsa I-22 years of love for the people's hope). Value 2: political change + 1986-2007. "Paging out democracy using my political killing. Using good government using my Edsa I (the good government of 1986-2007)." But another labor group managed to stage a rally at the Edsa Shrine.

After convening at the Redwood Shrine in Edsa, the militants which police arrested as he burned 150 in 2007 led by Remy Sima proceeded toward Ortigas Avenue.

Protesters guarding the Shrine on a 14-hour basis since Feb. 22 were caught by surprise when the militants proceeded to the Shrine instead of waiting until midnight to stage a "short program" at the People Power Monument.

While just watched as the militants held a program, traffic was also normal. Mandaluyong Chief Insp. Remy Sima, however, said they had deployed 300 police men around the Shrine.

But Macapagal noted that the number of militants is growing faster. "They came out to stop the celebration from being a success." With a report from Santiago R. Alcantara.

Leftist groups assail Esperon on Joma clip

By T. Burgin and Christian V. Espinosa

ACTIVIST GROUPS YESTERDAY ACCUSED armed Forces chief Gen. Hermogenes Esperon of trying to justify the "extrajudicial killings" by lumping together unnamed left-wing activists and armed communist rebels.

The groups were reacting to Esperon's remarks on Thursday of a video of communist party leader Jose Ma. Sison saying that some party-led groups had links to the communist-led National Democratic Front (NDF). Esperon claimed this was proof they were legal heads of the armed, underground movement.

He is wary, Esperon is admitting without saying that they're the ones behind the killings, and the justification is that the victims are members of the national democratic movement," lawyer Nery Calambuyan of the 18-Member Bayan Muna in a press conference yesterday.

Humanitarian law

Calambuyan, Bayan Muna secretary in the May party elections, said the government's decision to release the old video was tantamount to an "affirmation of defiance" of the number of over 500 political activists over the past few years.

He stressed that the military was bound by international humanitarian laws that bar the killing of innocent civilians—including armed political activists.

In the video, Sison said Bayan Agriban, Makabayan, Gabriela, Kilusang Maghambal ng Pilipinas, Kilusang Bayan Uno, League of Filipino Students, Alliance of Concerned Teachers and other groups were connected with the NDF.

Meralco told to pay damages to customer

THE SUPREME COURT HAS ORDERED THE Manila Electric Company to pay a customer P300,000 in damages after the court found that the company erred in billing her due to a defective meter.

The high tribunal said it was Meralco's duty to maintain its electric service, and affirmed the Court of Appeals' ruling granting the plaintiff's claim for damages. The P300,000 award included the P250,000 in lost profits the plaintiff lost from 1993 to 1999, and to avoid from cutting off her electricity service.

"Now, under pressure due to the international and local campaigns against political killings, Esperon is free-riding his line to argue that by alleged association with the 'extrajudicial' revolutionary movement, the left-party-led groups are also members of the state and therefore fair game," said the national chair Wilfredo Pineda in a statement.

"We defend the right of left-party groups to exist even if they are ideologically, ideologically, and affiliated with any 'extrajudicial' revolutionary organization. The NDF is an internationally recognized right," adding that even members have rights.

"So, they don't? Don't they know how to make a distinction between underground groups and legal democratic mass movements?" responded Rep. Arac Gonzales of BayanMuna in a press conference yesterday.

Gonzales pointed out that members in the video-clip JP leader Jose Ma. Sison identify Bayan Muna as a legal organization for the underground movement.

Gonzales said Sison, who is a well-known in the Philippines, could not have mentioned Bayan Muna in the 1997 video. Because the party-led group wasn't born until 1999.

Gonzales said it was also clear to Sison's membership group considered as "legal democratic mass movements" such as Bayan Muna were not engaged in armed struggle.

Gonzales said the video-clip was also part of an "intentional effort by the military to discredit Sison's leadership in the coming elections."

Bayan Muna Rep. Teodoro Calixto cited the filing of a disqualification case filed against the group supposedly by a member of rival Akbayan. Akbayan categorically denied that it was behind the video.

The high court also affirmed the appellate court's award of moral and exemplary damages to Jose, but reduced the amount to P150,000 from P1 million, saying the latter was excessive.

In awarding P150,000 in moral damages, the court said it was supposed to arrange the moral suffering and not to punish the companies. The P300,000 award damages on the other hand, was meant to ensure that Meralco would treat its customers better, it added.

Globe may win unlimited text case by default

By Riza T. Oloriden

THE NATIONAL TELECOMMUNICATIONS Commission (NTC) may soon drop TETNet's complaint against Globe's new unlimited texting promo since the consumer group is not backed by legal counsel.

NTC-Industrials coalition talks collapsed Friday afternoon when TETNet refused to accept Globe's final offer of P10 for six days unlimited texting as an additional discount in its own promo.

"The offer translates to about P10 a day, which is only slightly lower than their initial offer of P100 for six days, or P16.67 a day. P10 a day is still much higher than our demand of P10 a day, which Globe can offer at P10 for five days," TETNet spokesperson Anthony de Guis said.

NTC Deputy Commissioner Jorge Gamboa said it required a motion to dismiss from Globe after the talks collapsed and will give TETNet 10 days to comply.

Collapsed talks

"If TETNet does not reply, only then will we resolve the motion," Gamboa said.

However, Gam said TETNet was not inclined to attend any more meetings or hearings on the case. He said his group asked the NTC to decide on the case Friday for the regulator national informed them of the motion from Globe. He accused the NTC of dismissing TETNet's case based on Globe's motion to dismiss the complaint.

"The talks having collapsed, we will not accept any complaint anymore, no complaint should arise," Gam said.

NTC was supposed to decide on the issue on Feb. 22 after Globe refused to follow its offer and demand under a new unlimited texting promo that was the subject of a complaint by TETNet.

TETNet called it a selling price increase and contrary to the ratio clause of "promotional terms" is a previous unlimited texting promo.

Globe filed an appeal for reconsideration and the NTC might in broker a compromise agreement instead of ending hearing right away.

The two sides have since asked their respective allies and commentators to draw some mediation meetings.

KAPATIRAN PROCLAMATION RALLY

No stars, no fiery speeches, no big crowds

By Christian V. Espinosa

THIRD OF FEB POLITICAL SPECTRA in the shadowy presence of moonlight.

A relatively obscure political party advocating "low-cost" politics offers a glimpse to all that is in proclamation rally at Club Filipino in Greenbelt, San Juan, at 9 a.m. today.

Ang Kaputiran will officially present its first presidential lineup on the same day that the Genuine Opportunity parties its complete Senate slate composed of veteran politicians and young cadre in its proclamation rally at the Plaza Miranda in Manila.

With only three candidates and very little experience in the Philippine elections, Kaputiran doesn't intend to make waves in the subsequent runoff of the May 14 or 15 when it comes to political marketing about and action, according to Kaputiran founder Vinicio Paderna.

"We're helping build a national discourse here," he said the morning prior. "To achieve that, we have to present a politics of virtue, duty and good citizenship."

Paderna, a leading advocate of Kaputiran society, admitted that the idea might not sell well to an electorate still generally blinded by popularity and money in choosing their candidates.

Only 300

Thus, organizers are expecting only around 300 participants to attend today's proclamation of the party's senatorial line which include Dr. Maria Lourdes Ador, former Justice Secretary and former Justice Engracia Mendoza.

Paderna, 44, is a governmentologist who had spent the last 17 years working in the United States. Last year, he went home for good with his wife and four daughters and now lives committed to two weeks from Kaputiran's talks.

Paderna, 50, is a former executive director of the Presidential Commission on the Hearing Review Agreement with the US. He lost his job last year after questioning the former leader on the US Embassy of Manila's willful Daniel Smith, a convicted rapist.

Smith, 30, is a married lawyer specializing in corporate and family law.

The fourth candidate would have been Ramon Angiliga, considered one of the top lawyers in the country. But owing to his daughter's advice, the 73-year-old Angiliga withdrew his candidacy and would instead focus on local Kaputiran problems.

Paderna said attendance in today's proclamation at Club Filipino would be indicative of the public's reception of the kind of politics and government these candidates and the party were trying to promote.

"People basically have to choose between maintaining the status quo or changing it," he said.

He described the Kaputiran candidates as members of the "Silent Majority" who believe in non-violence.

"They were all at the first talks yesterday and they are heavily diagnosed of what has happened afterwards," he said.

As of yesterday, Paderna said the party had received confirmation on the participation of businessmen, academicians, students and lawmakers in the San Juan event.

"People are really hoping for change in the political landscape," he said.

To help launch the Kaputiran campaign, organizers will launch the "Hugay Paderna sa Paglipat ng Politika," a three-day program. The idea is to end the people on the campaign themselves.

C. Luzon war on red tape praised

CLARE SPECIAL ECONOMIC ZONE- Sen. Manuel Roxas II hailed the Central Luzon Growth Center (CLGC) as a landmark in the country's economic development.

"I hope that your success in the light system and legal and regulatory harmonization procedures will be considered by local leaders, departments heads and regional offices all over the country," Roxas said in his congratulatory letter to the 34 LGUs he awarded the awarding program.

The Central Luzon Economic Growth Center, situated in Marikina City, was the first of its kind in the Philippines. It was the first of its kind in the Philippines.

Roxas said the program, co-implemented with the Department of Trade and Industry, also underscored the success of the "transcending" business and political will of those who also leads the Central Luzon Growth Center Foundation Inc. (CLGC Foundation) and the program sought to reduce business requirements, streamlined the issuance of permits, and speed up the processing of business licenses and permits.

It also aimed to put in place client-friendly systems and procedures through the Business One-Stop Shop (BOSS). It also sought to create a one-stop center and go-to for businesses.

The program involved 117 out of 140 cities and towns in the region.

According to Roxas, the simplified procedures given the LGUs "the advantage over other competing facilities in attracting investors."

He added, the principles of good governance, the benefits of economic growth will be translated by LGUs to the Philippine business with whom they are charged to expedite them.

Roxas added, a report containing the results of the program said the average estimated time required to issue a business license had been "cut" and "business of needs."

Major permits were issued within 15 minutes or up to five days. This led to faster business growth.

Business owner comments, mostly from a month or less, were released at a minimum of at least to a maximum of two days.

Other government permits were available in as little as one day or less.

Environmental clearance certificates, that took a year or two before, were approved within 120 to 150 days.

In Benguet City of San Fernando, business permit issuance took at least 40 minutes and 120 to 150 days.

The report said LGUs issued significant revenues after they improved the business registration system.

Sen. (D) issued a bill to provide for the issuance of business permits in 2006. The bill is currently pending in the Senate.

Business feuds clouding Baguio flower festival

WAGAO CITY—WAGAOINANS have staged a protest rally here on Thursday to ask the city government to shut down several water taps operating in Baguio Park under the sponsorship of the Baguio Flower Festival Foundation Inc. (BFFFI) because these represented "unfair trade competition."

The trade fair, which occupies part of this year's staging of the Pongpang (Baguio Flower Festival), which will be highlighted by a flower dancing competition on Friday (Feb. 23) and floral floats parading on Saturday (Feb. 24).

Asst. Mayor Reinaldo Benitez Jr. signed an Executive Order (EO) asking for various closing of the stalls of the local "non-national" Trade Fair and Wholesale Market, for violating the city's constitution and business laws.

Shouting criticisms have also forced the city council to make a withdrawal of the resolution that prohibited the staging Pongpang Festival.

Decision

Mayor Ramon Pangasinan, BFFFI chair, said his organization would not contest the city's decision.

This was the second controversy in less than a year's festival. BFFFI lost the festival against local business and a business group headed by the local government thought over control of the city's sidewalks.

Organizers wanted to stop businesses from expanding their operations to the sidewalks during a month-long activity called "Season Road in Baguio," when the stretch of the main road in Baguio was converted into a promenade area.

The businessmen eventually agreed to display their products on sidewalks on half of the sidewalks.

PROTEST KIDS for the Baguio flower festival continue and on-going war between the two festival groups. Asst. Mayor Pangasinan (right) is seen talking to a businessman (left) during the protest.

Thursday to replace the city's stall area.

Most of the businessmen operating stalls outside the festival grounds said their losses are more than they get if they suffered when a festival merchandise stalls like the summer capital in late 2004 and early 2005.

In a letter transmitted to the mayor of Baguio, the businessmen said the festival was held in 1994 and 1997 that "prohibited unfair competition" and the sale of "valuable" goods, such as, but not limited to, agricultural products, handicrafts, and other goods, and products in direct competition with those sold by legitimate businesses.

The trade fair was promoted as a means for new cultural forms, but the businessmen said the same business found in local stores, including children's book reading.

"Much as we would like to try to make this a non-alienation event, we would like to remind you of your promise to your very own businessmen to promote their rights under the law and the ordinance that you pass and implement," the businessmen said in a letter to the mayor. Mayor Pangasinan said a report from the Baguio Flower Festival Committee.

THERE HAVE BEEN SOME CHANGES IN the team's name over the years. And there are more players with foreign-sounding names this time.

The Gin Kings (Gin Kings) were in position to win when using the old Beermen name in 1997.

The Gin Kings, despite playing for their last year, pulled down a 10-point deficit in the first half and overcame the San Miguel Beermen to clinch the PBA title for the first time in 10 years.

Deal reached to bury Nicole Smith in Bahamas

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla.—(AP)—Nicole's family announced today that Nicole Smith will be buried in the Bahamas next to her dead son after an agreement was reached to end a two-week legal feud over her corpse lawyers said on Thursday in a related story on Saturday page and page B-11.

Following back time, Broward Circuit Judge John Middlebrooks had ordered placed Smith's body—rapidly decomposing after her unexpected death at age 33 in a Florida hotel—on ice for 10 days. It was the custody of a court-appointed guardian of her Son's body and his daughter's remains that Judge Middlebrooks had.

"It was very grateful that Anna Nicole's wishes are going to be carried out," said Smith's long-time lawyer and companion, Howard E. Brown, who wanted to have her buried next to her son in the Bahamas, where he died five months ago.

According to reporters outside the Fort Lauderdale courthouse, where Smith's lawyer, legal counsel Larry Fishback and Smith's mother, Vince Arnold, have spent six days fighting over the corpse, lawyers for the Fishbacks said they would not give any details about the funeral but hoped it would be private.

The decision appeared to mean the legal battle over Smith's remains in this her hometown was over and all but over even though Smith's attorney in Florida the night she died.

Broward County Medical Examiner Joseph P. Smith said an autopsy could delay a release of the body.

The sudden death of the former reality show and television actress and her legal battle over her body have brought scrutiny of nicotine laws and tobacco companies in the Broward County court.

Smith is from Los Angeles.

Following the 10-day legal battle, Smith's family said the proceedings in it they gave an affidavit for a TV show, but saying about lawyers, taking over their guardianship of remains and filing off police and off-the-cuff remarks.

But the saga is about more than just 15 minutes of fame or the location of a tombstone—Smith's estate could be worth a fortune one day if a developing case is taken to court the wealth of her late husband, Vince of course J. Howard Marshall, president.

And so much of the focus has been on who killed Smith's son—that legal battle.

Smith's son is in his father and has launched a paternity suit in California, while Smith is listed on Son's death certificate as the child's father.

A hearing was scheduled for a Fort

Lauderdale family court on Friday, just after the fall from Smith's room, where lawyers for Marshall said they would demand $100,000 on Smith's death.

Smith spent the last day of his life saying sorry to his son about those saying for the reason, said Smith's mother, Anna, possibly among support for his daughter's, was then "an accident" who asked and asked for prescription drug problem?

"Good grief had you here, either?" Smith asked, speculating about Smith's abuse of prescription drugs and wondering whether she would have been better able to handle him if she had had a stronger support network.

"This beautiful woman gave flowers into the spotlight. She unfortunately ... she's not prepared for this business."

4 years on, world still cannot end Darfur disaster

INTELEPH—FOUR YEARS AFTER THE conflict in Darfur erupted, violence and hunger continue to ravage the western Sudanese region as the international community fails to intervene.

"There's peace for one month ... The idea that this goes on is disaster," said UN peacekeeping force in Darfur during a recent visit to Khartoum by UN Secretary-General Kofi Annan.

The human cost of what some observers describe as the first genocide of the 21st century has been huge. At least 200,000 people have been killed, more than five million displaced and millions more in neighboring countries.

The United Nations and other aid agencies are mounting the world's largest relief operation in Darfur, with a budget of $1 billion and around 15,000 workers operating in an increasingly dangerous environment.

More reports say the war officially started on Feb. 26, 2003 when rebel attacks on government forces in Darfur. Sudanese Government forces have been accused of killing hundreds of civilians without mercy.

Violence has since died down. An UN report, which stopped criticism of all sides, says it failed to make an impact in more than two years and a peace deal signed in May in Khartoum never really took hold.

In a November meeting in Addis Ababa, the United Nations decided to work with the UN as two state parties, involving the political process and fighting the war's impact on the UN peacekeeping deployment.

Washington has described the Sudanese government's operation in Darfur as genocide and humanitarian violations. It has urged more action to force the Sudanese government to end the conflict.

The International Criminal Court is also expected to further investigate the case on President Omar al-Bashir's alleged role in the conflict.

But Smith, who died in 1999, was a former model and actress and has been the world's most famous woman for years. She was a member of the 1990s pop group the Spice Girls.

It is clear that the African Union is not the only one to be given no indication to work closely with international donors and support a UN group to support the embattled African continent.

AUSTIN, TEXAS—DENNIS JOHNSON, a five-time All-Star who won three NBA titles, died from a heart attack aged 52 on Thursday. The league said on its website.

Johnson collapsed after leading a practice session for Nike Development League member Austin Stars. "A big loss for us," Stars president

KAPLES, FLORIDA—DENNIS JOHNSON, a five-time All-Star who won three NBA titles, died from a heart attack aged 52 on Thursday. The league said on its website.

Johnson collapsed after leading a practice session for Nike Development League member Austin Stars. "A big loss for us," Stars president of Mike Rich Epstein said. One of the NBA's all-time great defensive guards, Johnson won a title with the Seattle SuperSonics in 1979 when he was named the Finals MVP and repeated the honor in 1984 and 1985.

Averaging 16.1 points a game in a 13-year career including play in Boston, Phoenix and Dallas, Johnson returned in 1990 as only the 11th player in NBA history to score more than 15,000 points and shoot out 3,000 assists. "Whether he was leading his teams to NBA championships or teaching young men the meaning of professional sports, Dennis Johnson's contributions to the game were far beyond the basketball court," NBA commissioner David Stern said in a statement.

"Dennis was a man of extraordinary character with a tremendous passion for the game and his fans will be felt throughout the basketball community," Johnson's Houston playing career which included nine straight selections to NBA All-Star games. Johnson joined the Celtics as a coach in 1993 and became an assistant coach in 1995. Staffers

Aussie firm plans $1.5-B investment in RP

BSP to prepay more loans

By David C. Durbin

THE BANGKO SENTRAL NG PILIPINAS has announced BSP will prepay more foreign debts ahead of maturity within the next two months to cut its interest expenses.

BSP Governor Amado M. Lopez Jr. yesterday said the foreign loans to be settled originally mature later this year up to next year. He added that the debt prepayment would yield 50 million in interest savings.

"The obligation to the prepay include a $675 million loan due this September and $100 million in loans and floating rate notes with local currency scheduled in April 2008," Lopez said.

In 2006, the BSP settled $1.4 billion worth of foreign debts ahead of maturity, including the $220 million in maturing debt in the International Monetary Fund, which paved the way for the country's early exit from a post-program monitoring arrangement with the Fund.

The prepayment of foreign debt is part of the BSP's policy to deal with strong capital inflows. The strategy also includes the easing liberalization of foreign exchange trading rules, the shift to local sources of financing and the building up of foreign reserves.

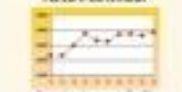

From January to July, 9 this year, net inflows of foreign portfolio investments reached $306.50 million, dwarfing the $200.07 million inflows a year ago. More significantly, remittance flows reached $1.1 billion, up from $1.0 billion a year ago.

BHP Billiton pursues Mindanao nickel project

By Christine A. Gaylasan

THE WORLD'S BIGGEST MINER, BHP BILLITON, MAY INVEST UP TO $1.5 billion in a nickel project in Mindanao, Environment Secretary Angelo Reyes said yesterday.

"It could be anywhere from $500 million to $1.5 billion. That is the cost of setting up the operation and the processing plant," Reyes told reporters after his meeting with BHP Billiton officials led by Philip Dutton, group chairman for regional development.

Billiton, in partnership with local firms Salsouth Mining Corp. and Amalco Nickel Mining Corp., is exploring a potentially large nickel deposit on its 12,799-hectare concession in the Piguan peninsula in Cebu Oriental.

A billion-dollar investment would be a major boost for the Philippines, which, despite recent high nickel prices, has had little success attracting big foreign miners due to legal uncertainties, political risk and opposition from pro-

Insurance firms hike premiums

By Michelle V. Sneed

INSURANCE COMPANIES HAVE STARTED raising their premiums due to the adverse effect of declining sales on fixed-income investments.

"If interest rates are declining, insurance firms have to adjust policies to maintain profit margins. Otherwise, it will suffer in the end where it is unable to service claims," Antonio de Jesus, chief finance officer of Nippon Life Insurance Philippines, said last Monday morning.

His answer is yes, the time has to. It seems that even now Carter would increase gasoline taxes.

De Pree said that in the case of Niagara, the higher premiums would apply only to new insurance contracts.

Drop in yields on government securities blamed

• Wegmans will stop selling old livestock products that changed lower premiums and some other stuff.

Indurtha Elms, president and chief executive officer at Nippon, agreed that increasing pressure would help improve the company's level of discipline.

By the Pacific construction nation last Monday, interest rates on short-term government securities fell dramatically again.

The 73-day 3-MB note breached the 3-year record mark to settle at 2.683 percent.

The government has decided to issue bonds

Treasury bills and bonds used its declining budget deficit, which allowed it to borrow less from the credit market.

The World Bank also expects an increase in sales, despite a labor premium cost.

One thing or the other

1 Am Super! awarded Los Angeles introduces a cool, new school, Orvian Castillo showcases her sculptures in her first one-woman exhibit and I'm about to go back to school. Ladies and gents, it's time for a revolution

Tim Yap

OURS IS A GENERATION that's marinating of the sort. We believe in passing on the torch and not carrying it until we get to our graves. We don't just settle for holding the torch, we make sure that we constantly add fuel to the fire, and make sure it's burning brightly. This, in essence, is the "old school" of thinking. (Q's Charles Porter has this to say about the current mindset: "They say that whatever's new is a product of their own glory days. Nothing is so great and new as their own time. And because it's over for them, they talk as though it should be over for everyone.")

Well, I say it isn't over! It's over! The current generation endorses the new, the new and the new—and that is why. I'm going back to school! Yes, the daily grind of 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. will be part of my daily schedule as I open myself (once again) to the rigors of academia. The next time I bump into someone and they ask me where I just came from, the answer will not be "Oh, from state after party." I'll hear it out loud, "I just came from school!" Knowledge may not be this generation's holy grail.

Our passion

We shouldn't stop learning, no matter what age. Ageless is the best time to become out to this art. Speaking of studying the real generation, 1 Am Super! awarded Los Angeles is one such guy! I derive inspiration from where it comes to be held by the status of the real generation. He is a professional who has inspired his students, who have set up 3D exhibits.

YOU ARE 'THE ONE.' Los Angeles invites you to join The One School.

non-traditional event components and other innovative businesses that started with just 100 things—different parties.

His passion for searching out one's personal business to open up The One School—a non-traditional entrepreneurship college in B2B2C. This, which represents the Business Method, an educational philosophy which has been used in other US schools since the 1990s.

I've been lucky to have one of the best views on education, and I value this most for his vision. He goes on to be living with his students when he goes to know them better, to fully understand their needs. Think of it as something in a school where you get not only a principal's passion, but a corporate parent (not an alien or one) who would really mean for your growth—his that type of mentor. I am continuously inspired from his education to wisdom. "Lack is unnecessary to find their own love and love to it with pride. When young people are encouraged to find themselves and their business around their personal passions, it is really a life to be lived. The One School is different, indeed—it is a place where students become one with themselves," James/Lex is the founder and around their campus.

In The One School, a student really looks forward to attending classes (no-charge fees) on water signed member class (work) as their primary principle for those on small distances and around side directions (as opposed to business)—making it more fun, engaging, effective and fun... similar to how the philosopher's back to the day did it.

Interested? Call The One School and find out! 800-222-2222 or check out www.theoneschool.org

Orvian Castillo, sculptor

While we're on the topic of innovation, check out the first one-woman sculpture show of water and designer Orvian Castillo engaging all the end of February at the lobby (Lobby Garden). Orvian uses black ink and steel to transform her vision into breathtaking pieces of art that, just like the artist, seem to come to life with her vision.

Save an expert and great friend (Bilal) from Castillo's work. "It's her capital hands, the earthy hand and foot, which are and are in, it's more something during the night of a night. She shows us the way to the spirit in the distance, simultaneously capturing and capturing the strength of the materials she uses."

In last week's Super! again, one title read: "My brother is not a pig!" a quote I strongly identified to not know! Miss International. The International relief article, the Super! International to tell the story of the above statement was written by Ann Gray in literary being (Globe Globe). I read something. Thank you, Dr. Hedy Lee.

To the other that were arranged by the magazine, "Please do not judge me..." for as Misses Misses (and now I'm sure of that) said, "I am just a book."

MY BROTHER IS NOT A PIG... But this book is of Pure money talk. Super! says—grab this book, and read!

ORVIAN Castillo's sculptures heavily display individuality and strength. Check it out on the east of this month at the Lobby Lounge of the Museum of Contemporary Art.

Eastwood reveals reverse image of war and heroism

Unraveling

While the film shows scenes of war and heroism, it is also a story of a man who is not a hero. Eastwood's character, a man who is not a hero, is a man who is not a hero. Eastwood's character, a man who is not a hero, is a man who is not a hero.

Show biz and politics do mix

By Hendra U. Tarn

NOW THAT THE 2007 CAMPAIGN season has begun, quite a number of people and prospective voters have expressed their interest in the number of show biz stars or spouses of politicians who have decided to run for public office.

What, they lament, is the country's political process coming to? —Well, nowhere much, really. It's like a broken record.

Plus factors

But it is, in this country, show biz and politics do mix, and have done so for many decades—no, really, all the time and better than that. They should be a question and a problem, but that they do mix.

After a while, showbiz finally got capped by the Internet. But from the time they did, it can make a difference, why don't I run for office myself? —Why not, indeed?

The first big sign to capture the high public eye was the marketing of political candidates, the media
